

Extended colour palette has EVALAM reinforcing creative freedom

Growing its portfolio to an impressive 18 essential colours, EVALAM has now expanded its EVA colour range with five new shades - offering modern aesthetics without compromising safety or durability. Designed for outdoor use, each innovative option enhances architectural expression - underscoring the company's leadership in laminated glass solutions.

For customers who are after a modern and vibrant style without compromising safety and durability, Evalam's latest expansion of its EVA colour range rings as music to the ears. Indeed, with the launch of its five new EVA colours the company continues to innovate in the laminated glass sector. With these new colour choices, its portfolio extends now to a total of 18 essential colours - including transparent, translucent and opaque options. This wide range tailors both colour and intensity to the specific requirements of any project. Here the combination of these different tones offers a great variety of shades and flexibility - providing the glass processors, architects and designers the opportunity to create unique and tailor-made solutions. Thanks to such customization capability, creativity can be expressed with practically no limitations.

The five new colours hit the market to provide a modern, vibrant design that will compromise on neither safety nor durability. Created and manufactured with an aim to preserve both their intensity and aesthetics over time, they have successfully passed the certification tests required for outdoor use. This development provides industry professionals with a wider range of options for façade projects, railings and other structures exposed to the elements - ensuring strength and durability. It strengthens Evalam's commitment to quality in the area of laminated glass - reinforcing the company's market position as a benchmark for innovative solutions in architecture as well as interior and exterior design under the safety glass scenario.
